The performance and holdings in this document are for the Model Portfolio and are not a guarantee or an indication of the actual performance or holdings of a client's portfolio due to differences in the timing and transaction prices for portfolio changes, client investments and withdrawals during the period, timing of receipt of dividends and income distributions, platform administration fees, transactional costs associated with the client's portfolio, and any portfolio exclusions required by the client. Past performance is not a reliable indicator or guarantee of any future performance. The value of an investment may rise or fall with the changes in the market. Inflation is measured by the Consumer Price Index (CPI). We use the most recent CPI as an estimate until the actual CPI is available from the Australian Bureau of Statistics.

What happened in markets over the month?

- US share prices were in a tailspin with President Trump intensifying the tariff war. President Trump proposed a 25% tariff on automobile imports and the imposition of “reciprocal tariffs” on those countries that impose any taxes that challenge US exports. This was perceived as a threat to global trade relationships as well as raising prices for American consumers. US consumers are starting to respond with rising inflation expectations and a slowdown in spending this year. European shares fell in sympathy despite the European Central Bank cutting interest rates by 0.25% in early March. Chinese shares provided a positive surprise by making strong gains. Better than expected Chinese industrial production and retail spending data in the opening months of the year were encouraging despite the headwinds of a weak Chinese property sector and tariffs imposed by the Trump Administration.
- Australian shares slipped in line with global shares. Australia’s economic data remains modest. There was positive news with the monthly inflation indicator showing annual inflation declining to 2.4% in February. Consumer sentiment in March also posted an encouraging rise in response to milder inflation and the Reserve Bank cutting interest rates in February. However, the previous strength in the labour market appears to be fading with February recording a sharp decline in jobs. Notably the business surveys also suggest subdued confidence and caution over Australia’s prospects with a Federal election on May 3rd.
- Global government bond yields were buffeted by President Trump’s tariff agenda and varying assessments of economic growth and inflation risks. Credit markets spreads increased given the volatility in global share markets.

What happened in the Portfolio?

The Portfolio generated a negative return for the March quarter, global share markets are now facing considerable global political risks. March provided a sharp ‘wake-up call’ with the realisation that US President Trump is threatening a ‘global trade war’, announcing a sequence of ‘on again - off again’ tariffs.

- The Realindex Global Share Value fund performed strongly over the month, outperforming its benchmark by 2.47%. The funds tilt towards companies exhibiting undervalued earnings and strong dividend yield proved fruitful amidst a downward volatility in global equity market to open 2025.
- The Pendal Emerging Markets outperformed its benchmark by 1.25% over the month, benefiting from market rotation into less tariff exposed emerging markets, and strong benchmark relative stock selection.
