Portfolio Changes

Effective Date: 27th May 2026

What changes have we made?

We have removed the Antares Ex-20 Australian Shares fund from portfolios, shifted from a dedicated mid-cap domestic equity exposure and reallocated these funds to a new core style replacement manager.

What is the rationale for these changes?

This change has been driven by two related drivers: the sustained underperformance of the Antares Ex-20 Australian Equities Fund, the difficulty in sourcing an alternative ex-20 manager and our scenarios-based view on the current macroeconomic environment and its potential challenges for domestic mid-caps.

1. Antares - manager performance and a replacement challenge

Antares Ex-20 has delivered inconsistent and ultimately disappointing outcomes over the past 24 months and has been subject to heightened watchlist monitoring for an extended period now. Our assessment has concluded that this underperformance was structural in nature, driven by the investment process itself and not one on more exogenous factors. As such, the decision was made to seek a potential replacement for this manager.

Herein lines our second challenge, our assessment of alternative ex-20 managers failed to produce an option that combines sufficient conviction in the investment team and process, a demonstrable track record, and an appropriate fee structure commensurate with a place within the Premium Series portfolios.

2. Macroeconomic environment - cyclical headwinds for the ex-20 segment

Further to our manager replacement challenge, while the long-term structural case for mid-cap exposure remains largely intact, we believe there are several scenarios over the short to medium term under which the ex-20 segment continues to face headwinds, supporting a cyclical decision to reduce the deliberate mid-cap overweight at this point in the cycle, these include:

Multiple compression risk: The ex-20 universe carries a larger concentration in high-multiple growth names (think WiseTech, Xero, TechnologyOne & Pro Medicus) that are disproportionately sensitive to the interest rate environment. With the RBA cash rate at elevated levels and rate-cut expectations pushed out, duration pressure on long-dated earnings streams remains a live risk. Many of these names experienced material deratings through late 2025 and have only partially recovered.

Earnings delivery risk: The earnings hurdles embedded in elevated ex-20 growth stock valuations remain demanding amid softening global growth, increasing AI-driven competitive disruption to software businesses, and domestic consumer pressure. The February 2026 reporting season confirmed this risk is real, with several high-multiple names missing expectations and guiding lower.

Small caps offer better relative value: Australian small-cap valuations sit near multi-decade lows relative to large caps, with FY26 earnings growth for smaller companies expected to outpace the broader index. For exposure to the higher-growth segment beyond the top 20, we believe the current risk-reward in small caps outweighs that in ex-20 mid-caps. We therefore retain dedicated active small-cap exposure via Fairview while leaning out of the mid-cap overweight.

Ultimately, this is a cyclical positioning decision rather than a structural abandonment of the mid-cap thesis. We retain scope to re-establish a more deliberate mid-cap allocation when the valuation and macro backdrop is more supportive, noting that the newly appointed Alphinity strategy also retains flexibility within its mandate to implement a similar mid-cap tilt.

Who is Alphinity, what is their strategy and why were they selected?

Alphinity was selected on three grounds: manager quality, complementarity with the existing manager cohort, and access to a highly attractive fee point owing to MLC's existing relationship and investment scale.

Manager quality

Alphinity Investment Management is a founder-led, majority staff-owned boutique established in 2010. The strategy targets quality, undervalued companies entering earnings upgrade cycles, using a proprietary Composite Research Model that blends quantitative and fundamental inputs. The process is disciplined, repeatable, and independently validated. Alphinity's capabilities are well known to MLC, given our exposure to the manager within other MLC investment programs.

Interaction with the existing manager cohort

Each manager in the Premium Series Australian equities allocation plays a distinct role, which is preserved under the new structure:

- ClearBridge (Active Direct - unchanged). Concentrated large-cap portfolio with a quality-yield focus and after-tax optimisation via franking credits and capital gains management. Deliberately avoids the high-multiple growth names under cyclical pressure.
- Alphinity (Active All-Cap). Earnings-upgrade driven and GARP-oriented, providing genuine stylistic differentiation from ClearBridge. Hard sector limits ($\pm 7.5\%$) and daily independent risk monitoring provides enhanced portfolio construction discipline, supporting a more resilient Australian Equities program. Critically, Alphinity's all-cap mandate can selectively extend into mid-cap names when earnings upgrades support it – without being required to hold them when they do not.
- Fairview (Active Small Cap - unchanged). Dedicated, growth-biased small-cap alpha. Its role as the deliberate complement to the larger-cap components is unchanged, and it provides exposure to the segment currently offering the most attractive valuation entry point.

What are the underlying portfolio impacts?

	Premium Conservative 30	Premium Moderate 50	Premium Balanced 70	Premium Growth 85	Premium High Growth 98
Australian shares
Antares Ex-20 Australian Equities Fund	-	-	-2.0%	-4.0%	-5.0%
Alphinity Australian Share Fund	-	-	+2.0%	+4.0%	+5.0%

Look-through implications: Replacing a dedicated ex-20 mandate with an active all-cap manager produces a deliberate shift in the Australian equities market-cap profile, with the sleeve moving modestly toward large caps (large ~62% to ~69%, mid ~27% to ~22%, small ~10% to ~9%).

The reduction in mid-cap weight reflects both the removal of the dedicated ex-20 fund and the cyclical decision to reduce the deliberate mid-cap overweight. The ~22% mid-cap exposure that remains is an active outcome of Alphinity’s earnings upgrade process rather than a mandate floor, it can increase when conditions support it. Small-cap exposure via Fairview is unchanged and the small total reduction in portfolio small cap exposure was driven by residual exposure within the ex-20 strategy.

Portfolio fee impact

Despite the highly attractive fee point of the new strategy, current allocations within portfolios remain small and so the changes resulted in only a minor reduction in overall portfolio fees across most wrap platforms.

Netwealth and AMP North investors are currently invested in the standard rate Alphinity unit trust as these platforms are unable to apply customised rebates. MLCAM is working with the platforms and Alphinity to deliver a fee reduction to investors as soon as practical. Again, given the relatively small portfolio weights, total portfolio cost changes for AMP and NetWealth are minor.
